

Inheritance, Variation & Evolution

Islands of Evolution: Europe's Largest Spider

The Madeiran wolf spider is big enough to eat small lizards, and here Professor Richard Fortey comes face to face with one.

<https://bbc.in/2wdyjy2>

How Bats Stay One Step Ahead

Clip explaining the characteristics that allow bats to hunt so stealthily, including echo-location

<https://bbc.in/2lY3rEl>

Islands of Evolution: Madagascar: A World Apart

The Indri lemur, one of the rarest in the world, is shown in its habitat in the Madagascan rainforest.

<https://bbc.in/2WseTQo>

The Dolphins' Amazing Brain

An examination of what makes a dolphin's brain so smart and how this helps when hunting its prey.

<https://bbc.in/2QuVqLa>

Designed for Living: Human Evolution

Skeletons are the key focus of discussion in this programme - what is their purpose and how do our skeletons vary to those of a chimpanzee?

<https://bbc.in/2wjMK3m>

The Discovery of Gene Switches in Maize

Maize kernels in the wild often aren't yellow, despite what can be found in supermarkets - so how is this achieved?

<https://bbc.in/3dd4Nci>